Students Angry About Faculty Firing

The UNO Student Senate met last Thursday and, following a period of heated debate, voted to approve a resolution calling for the contract renewal of UNO foreign language instructor Karen Soukup.

Much of the debate centered around the advisability of the senate making recommendations concerning the retention or dismissal of faculty members. The Faculty Senate earlier refused to hear a presentation of the resolution.

Proponents of the resolution argued that while it was not possible for all senators to become well-acquainted with the qualifications of every teacher on campus, in this case the testimony heard by the student representatives was extremely favorable to the faculty person involved.

Over 130 students signed petitions favoring the retention of Soukup and forty students wrote letters in her behalf.

It was pointed out that the senate was not sitting as a board of appeals or a court, but was only being asked to make a recommendation on the matter.

The controversy arose when it was stated that Mrs. Soukup would be dismissed from teaching at UNO because she did not have a doctorate. The Foreign Languages department wished to replace the popular French teacher with someone holding a Ph.D.

Several students appeared on behalf of Soukup, including Dale Munhall, who authored the resolution.

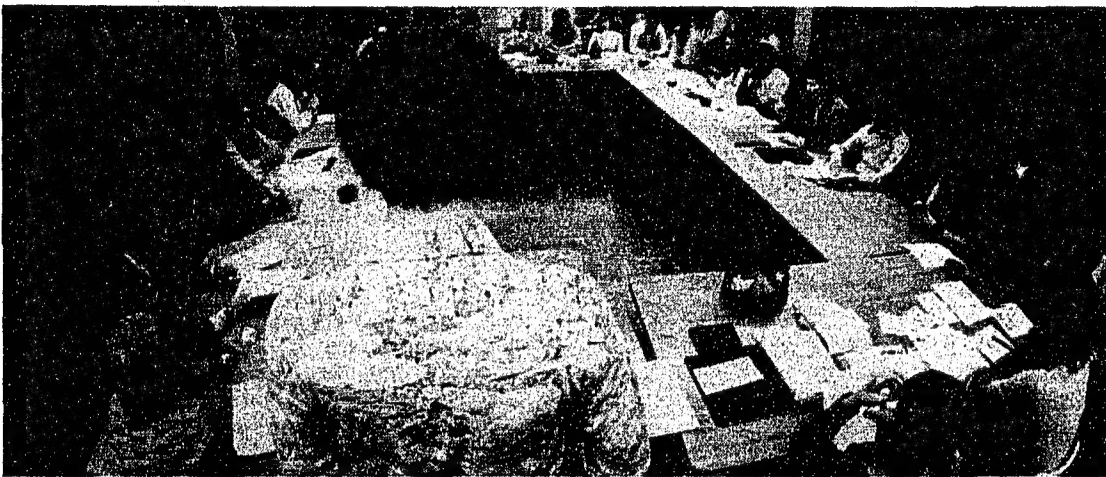

Sponsored by Arts and Sciences senator Herb Winsor, the resolution stated that students were "concerned with the need for excellence in the University," and that "Mrs. Karen Soukup had demonstrated, as acknowledged by her faculty peers and students, that she exemplifies these rare qualities necessary to an excellent educator."

The resolution continued: "Therefore, to deny her promotion and thereby necessitate her dismissal based on current rules, would be a violation of the concept of excellence for which these measures were instituted. Her dismissal would constitute not only a gross injustice, but it would also be a grave disservice to the real stature of the University."

The senate concluded by imploring "those in positions of authority to exercise their right and obligation as enlightened decision-makers and invoke the provisions for exceptional action in this case of exceptional merit."

In other senate action, Coach Mike Palmisano spoke concerning UNO wrestling and athletics. Palmisano fielded questions from the senators concerning his ideas about athletics at UNO. Palmisano will possibly be selected to the World University Games in Moscow, Russia next August. Currently, fourteen coaches throughout the U.S. are being considered to attend the games. Four will be selected. The senate voted to send a letter of recommendation to the committee on the behalf of Palmisano.

Marlene Fuller was selected to the Student Center Policy Board. The senate also named Herb Winsor to the Regents Advisory Board.

Yes Virginia, There Will Be Commencement

Saturday, December 16, marks the Commencement exercises for all UNO graduating students this semester. It is estimated that approximately 600 students will graduate.

Dean of Student Personnel Donald Pflasterer, said the ceremonies will start at ten a.m. in the UNO Field House. "There will be a speaker, but as of yet, it is not known who it will be," Pflasterer said. He also added that the speaker will be from the "outside."

Arrangements for cap and gown have to be made by Dec. 4, in the UNO Bookstore. There is a fee for renting the cap and gown Pflasterer said the Commencement exercises are being held during finals, thus "degrees won't actually be handed out." Degrees will be mailed to the students at a later date. Pflasterer said the graduates will not be recognized by name, but, they will file up onto the podium, probably in two columns from each side.

Letters explaining the final details of Commencement will be sent out to seniors in about another week Pflasterer said.

There was some question as to whether to have commencement or not. In the past, Commencement exercises were held only once a year, but the university decided to hold exercises after the first semester this year along with the regular exercises in the spring.

There will also be a Commencement Reception following the exercises in the Ballroom of MBSC for the graduates and their families.

The Commencement exercises are open to the public.

Tripping Out

During the semester break, students can take classes of an unusual nature. There are still some spaces available, and one of the class-trips can't go at all unless more people sign up.

The EUROPEAN STUDY TOUR is December 28-January 16. It's worth 3 credit hours. The instructors are Dr. D. J. Grandgenett and Dr. Leo Missinne.

The NATIONAL POLITICS, POWER, AND POLICIES trip to Washington D.C. takes place January 6-14. The instructors are Dr. Robert Ackerman and Dr. John Farr. Three credit hours are available and six more students have to sign up or no one can go.

READING IMPROVEMENT can be taken on campus for one hour of credit or for no credit. This course takes place December 27-January 17. Dr. John Query is the instructor.

OTHER ON-CAMPUS COURSE DURING THE INTERSESSION (Non-Credit Only): Ecology and the Consumer, Jan. 8-Jan. 12. 9AM-Noon.

Chemistry Tutorial Program, Jan. 8-12. 9AM-Noon.

Chess, Jan. 8-12. 7-9 PM.

Bob Dylan, Poet and Prophet, Jan. 11. 7-10 PM.

Additional information and registration procedures may be obtained from the College of Continuing Studies, Room 184, Admin. Building, for credit courses.

Information regarding Non-Credit courses is available in the Conference Center, Division of Community Services, College of Continuing Studies.

BREAKAWAY

The Breakaway is here!

Editor Rich Brown announces that UNO's magazine-yearbook for Spring 1972 has arrived from the printers and will be available to students in the MBSC second floor cloakroom from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. For night students, the volume will be distributed at the "Main Control Room" from 2 p.m. until ten at night!

And that's not all!

The publisher of the remarkable book has agreed to make available for a limited time only, absolutely free of charge, several hundred sets of hardcovers to permanently bind your own personal copy of the Breakaway! But remember, supply is limited, so hurry to get yours now!

BUDGET BRIEFING

Interested students from all three campuses will receive a briefing concerning the Nebraska University proposed budget next Tuesday, November 28, at 3:30 p.m. in Room 315 of the Milo Bail Student Center.

All students are urged to attend if possible in order to obtain a knowledgeable background in this area before budget hearings begin in the legislature next January.

Pre-Registration Changes Made

Most University of Nebraska at Omaha students who pre-register for second semester classes will have until Feb. 23 to pay tuition and fees in full.

Partial payment of $75 or total tuition and fees, whichever is less, must be paid from Dec. 18 to Jan. 9. Dates will be assigned individually, on a staggered basis, during the UNO pre-registration period Nov. 20-22, and Nov. 27-Dec. 1, and Dec. 4-8 and Dec. 11-13.

The policy regarding payment is different from the one in effect at this time last year. Then, students paid tuition and fees in full at registration.

The pre-registration schedule calls for currently-enrolled students with the largest number of accumulated credit hours to register first. Graduate students, and undergraduates with 115 or more credit hours, may register Monday (Nov. 20).

Persons not currently enrolled have until Jan. 15 to file admissions credentials for the second semester. These persons then may register for second semester classes Jan. 15-17.

Payment of tuition and fees may be mailed to the UNO Cashier, Box 688, Downtown Station, Omaha, or placed in the drop box outside the Cashier's Office in the UNO Administration Building.

UNO resident students pay a flat rate of $246 for 12 to 16 credit hours. The non-resident student pays $609 a semester for 12 to 16 credit hours.

Faculty Meets Senators

The UNO Faculty and Staff Legislative Committee sponsored a "Meet the Senators" social hour last Friday, followed by a dinner honoring several Omaha-area state senators at the Prom Town House.

Present at the affair were veteran senators state William Skarda, John Savage, George Syas, William Moylan, P. J. Morgan, David Stahmer, and newly-elected senators James Dickinson and Frank Lewis.

The Legislative Committee feels it is extremely important for senators to meet and know as many faculty and staff as possible to promote good relations between the legislature and the university community.

Committee Chairman Dr. Gale Oleson, director of UNO Counseling and Testing, said he felt the evening was very successful.

A good time was had by all.

STUDENTS NEEDED

All Students in good standing are eligible to apply for appointment to the following committees.

Ad Hoc Committee to Investigate Class Withdrawal Policy

University Senate Instructional Media Committee

Student Senate Student Affairs Committee

Student Senate Public Relations Committee

Publications Board (determines editors of student publications)

Budget Commission (monitors and presents budget allocations of Student Activity Fees)

Applications can be obtained in MBSC 232.

Graduate students in good standing are invited to apply for the position of graduate representative on the UNO Student Senate.

A vacancy has been created by the recent resignation of senator Mike Lawson.

Applications can be picked up and submitted at the Student Government Office, Room 232 MBSC.

Editorial What to Expect

Next month the Board of Regents will meet to discuss ways of resolving the recently publicized budget crisis facing the university system.

Most likely, as has been the case in the past, UNO will be made to bear more than its fair share of the cost to correct the situation and balance the budget.

A statement released last week by the UNO American Federation of Teachers local and published in the Friday Gateway described the situation well and raised several important questions. In addition to this, however, there are other related incidents that should be examined.

Going back to the last budget cut, prior to the elections, when two million dollars was lopped off the NU budget by the Regents, we can get an idea of the treatment that can be expected in the future. At that time the cut was distributed in this manner: one million was taken from the UNL budget and UNO and the Medical Center lost a half million dollars each. On the surface, UNL bore the greatest loss. In reality they suffered the least.

To put the whole matter in perspective, one must remember that the UNL budget — excluding federal funds of which UNL also gets the lion's share — is more than three times that of UNO. Yet their cut was only twice UNO's. The drop in budget represented only about 2.5 per cent of UNL's money. UNO's half million dollar cut took away nearly four per cent of its meager budget.

Stated another way, UNO gets only about one-sixth of the total state funds committed to the university, but was made to absorb a fourth of the budget cut. In contrast, the systems office, with a budget nearly a quarter the size of the Omaha campus allocation, took no cut at all.

It may be fatalistic to assume this, but we feel certain that after the whole matter of new budget slashing is concluded, you can count on UNO to not only receive less money per student to begin with, but to also bear the greatest percentage of reductions in budget thereafter if NU President Varner has his way.

The only bright spot in the picture is that everything must be decided by the legislature in the end and at this point it appears there are several Omaha-area senators who will not look kindly upon this type of treatment for their constituents.

The Open Gate Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor: We, the members of the UNO Home Economics Club, tried to get our current fund-raising project off to a good start by using as many means of publicity as possible. One of those means was publicizing the project in "Around The Campus With Stan Carter" as close to the starting date of November 13th as possible.

We're conducting our project now so that people might think of "Tupperware kitchen equipment and toys" for Christmas gifts and have their order back by December 7th, early enough for mailing if necessary. We're asking the general student body to support our project but how can they do so when they may not be informed? Regardless of posters, Dept. class announcements, and verbal communication, the majority of the student body will be informed of our project (or any other campus project) through the newspaper media! How can an organization use this media if it's undependable?

The project was to be promoted for three weeks, with publicity before Thanksgiving as well as after. Stan Carter felt that although the project began Monday, Nov. 13th, Wednesday, Nov. 22nd would be early enough for us to make a general announcement. Our project will not only be half way over, this is the day before Thanksgiving and many students may not be on campus. Thus, these "uninformed" students will be surprised when they visit our booth Nov. 28th and Nov. 29th on the first floor of the Student Center and discover that the project is more than two-thirds over and this is the first they've heard of it!

I feel that a club should know when to publicize specific upcoming events and that it is not up to "Stan Carter" to decide that it is too early to announce the event, especially if the beginning date is already past!

Arlene Winfrey,
President of UNO Home Economics Club

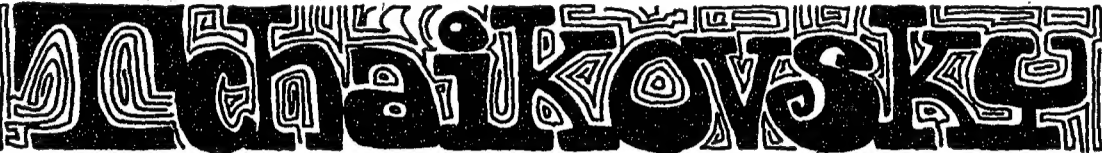

Stan Carter's Note: The announcement said the club was taking orders "now" and to have your orders in "by December first." When I look at an announcement, I look for a date. I saw the December First deadline and knew this was a ways off. If they had said a fund raising project was beginning Nov. 13th, I would have put in the announcement before Nov. 13th.

However, I agree I could have used better judgment and put the announcement in earlier. It is entirely my error, and not that of the Home Economics Department. But hopefully, anyone who wants Tupperware will see the announcement during the five days it will be in the halls and will get some. They should notice . . . I ran it twice in this issue. My apologies, Arlene, for not running it sooner.

Dear Gateway, We, the 1972 UNO cheerleaders, would like to say a very special thank you to our band. No only did they provide enjoyment for the crowds at all the home games' halftimes, but our energetic and enthusiastic pep band made it to so many away games and really added to the spirit. We know how long it took to get to some of those games and certainly appreciate the effort. They helped to spark up the crowd and made our job much more fun. A thank you to all for a job well done!

Sincerely,
The 1972 Cheerleaders:

Robin McNutt (Capt.), Sue Griego, Cleo Aulner, Gail Jones, Wendi Meyer, Sue Jaksich, Rhonda McNutt, Terri Tokarski, Sue Gregarus, Jan Sturba, Ron Tatreau, James Robinson, Bobby Knudson.

By Stan Carter

Night was overtaking day as late afternoon subsided in sweeps of orange brilliance on the horizon. Lights were on in the houses and in the junior high school in the distance. On the Workout Field, the chubby child gasped to insert breath into his sweat-drenched body.

His protesting, aching lungs wheezed. His leaden legs plopped hollowly on the sparse patches of grass.

Got the picture? I had a dream back in those ancient days years ago in the past. I wanted to kick the field goal that would help Nebraska beat Alabama in the 1973 Orange Bowl for the National Championship.

In those days, Nebraska was like those other teams — taking pride in being in the national rankings and working for one ultimate goal — a trip to the Gator Bowl or the Sun Bowl or the Blueberry Bowl or something.

But I knew their moment of glory would come . . . and I wanted to be there.

I hated gym class. They made me do the "bear crawl." They played games I didn't understand. How could anyone expect me to know the rules to Kickball? But they did. It's horrible taking showers when you're fat.

It's also horrible being in the hard, cruel world of the smell of leather, sweat, tile, benches, and old lockers. The locker room — no place for the insecure!

They called in the outfielders when I came to bat. They laughed at me in archery and I controlled my bowed temptation. The gym was a big, bright, hard place where others excelled and the gym coach ordered pushups.

When you're fat and a brilliant person with artistic intellect, gym class is horrible. Those laps around the track!

But I still had my dreams. For those willing to pay the price — destroy their bodies and study diagrams and have operations and get novacaine needles and get smashed or smash themselves — there are rewards. Cheerleaders! Pom Pom girls! The screaming crowd! The newspapers! Television! Aqua Velva! Screaming crowds! And the cheers of beautiful cheerleaders screaming from the glory giving hero-worshippers!!!!!!

But I was a fat slob! Except for one thing: my right leg.

The doctor said my right leg was shorter than the left one, but if I swung it forward very quickly, the water in my ligaments would expand the calcium deposits on the cartilage in my foot and it would suddenly expand for a split second in such a manner that if said foot was in contact with an object, the object would fire through the air with great accuracy and alacrity.

So early in the afternoon last Monday, I was on the intramural field down in Lincoln, Nebraska doing what I'd been practicing for years. Only now I knew someone else would be watching.

After kicking field goals of 60, 70, and 90 yards (I missed on the 80 yarder — wide to the left) someone came over to me. I trembled inside as I heard HIM actually speak to me.

"That's some foot ya got there, kid."

"Thanks, c-c-coach," I chattered.

"You know, we need a good kicker on our fifth string."

"Fine, coach. Only problem is (and this was the big moment — all my hopes and dreams) I don't like to work-out."

"Fine with me. Who needs pushups, anyway? You're only a kicker."

Run to daylight! I was in!

And so on January first, 1973, in Miami, Florida, in the Orange Bowl stadium, Alabama was ranked Number One and Nebraska was ranked Number Two after all the other teams had been defeated after our disastrous tie with Iowa State.

It was the fourth quarter, three second left to play in the game, the score 50 to 50. Rich Sanger had come down with the flu in Lincoln, the second string kicker, had broken his leg, the third string kicker had quit the team (the fool!) and the fourth string kicker had just been roughed up on the field and blew two PATs.

We'd moved the ball to our own 35 yard line.

The coach looked at me.

I picked up the white helmet with the big red "N" on it that I was proud to wear and trotted onto the field.

Turkey

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving. Tomorrow there is no school. Friday there is no school. Thursday and Friday the university is closed. There is no school Saturday or Sunday, either, of course. Give thanks. To me. If it weren't for me announcing the four-day vacation, it wouldn't happen. Think about it.

Mashed Potatoes

They stared and whistled.

"Wow! What a dish!"

Actually, it was Tupperware, which makes a nearly indestructible frisbee, but probably lacks certain aerodynamic configurations leading to sustained flight.

If you want some Tupperware, and want to help out the Home Ec. Dept., place your order by DECEMBER FIRST. Then you'll get it by Dec. 7th (remember China Harbor!) in time to make it in time for Christ's birthday.

Orders may be placed through any member of the club, or for further information, or in case you don't know any Home Ecers, call Ext. 449, or visit the room in which that extension will cause a telephone to ring — Admin. 101, Or call Arlene at 457-4221.
